In the annual American Auto Racing Writers and Broadcasters Association (AARWBA) media contest; Larry Mason earned multiple awards for his works published in 2018. The awards were announced at this year's Indianapolis 500.

Mason won first-place honors in Technical Report for his "Indy Car Tech – The Driver's Seat" article where he described the making of a formed seat for the drivers.

In other exciting news, The Team LMR website for driver Larry Mason also won for best website at: www.LarryMason.net.

Mason also earned a couple of second place awards for his photography in Action – Rossi at Long Beach, and People – Cara Adams from Firestone.

To round out these awards Mason also picked up a third place award in Feature Writing for "Firestone Racing Tires – Way Beyond Round and Black."

All of these articles and photos can be found at www.CarsAndCompetition.com where Mason has been a contributing editor.

AARWBA is the oldest and largest organization devoted to auto racing coverage. Founded in 1955, it is dedicated to increasing coverage of motorsports.

Incidentally, that website also won third place awards in the website division.

Sonia's View From the Passenger's Seat—Triumphant Return!

Hello everyone! I am back from my MRN hiatus after finally graduating Harvard Extension School earlier this year with my undergraduate degree from Harvard University. I want to thank everyone for your support while I pursued this long-standing dream. I have to say that I'm enjoying not having to write papers in the middle of the night, but in a way, I do miss the academic challenge, being exposed to new ideas, ions to group discussions. During my time there, my biggest take-away was that I learned how to work with people who had dissenting opinions/beliefs while remaining true to my own convictions and not fading. The assignment I am most proud of completing occurred during a philosophy course where we were all asked to prove the existence of God without bringing in religious texts/beliefs using certain philosophical arguments that we had studied. It's not as easy as it sounds! I also gained a new and genuine appreciation for the freedom we have in this country today by studying the history of Boston and then touring notable battle sites in person (one of the 9 trips I took to Boston to fill a residency requirement). I've taken my laptop to Larry's races and wrote many papers – my favorite was on Steinbeck written from Salinas/Monterey during the Run-Offs at Laguna Seca. Graduation was exciting, and it was a “destination graduation” – with three days' worth of events. There was the Latinx stole ceremony (photo on previous page), class picture, class reception, welcome to new alumni reception (which I did not attend as I was too tired), then the actual graduation which was a full day. Good thing Larry brought the telephoto lens!
